A Selective Bibliography: Teaching Technology to Law Students
Kenneth J. Hirsh

Articles

Books

Presentations

Kenneth J. Hirsh, Sally Anne Irvin, Maryanne Gerber, “Beyond the Traditional Curriculum: How to Create and Teach a Law Practice Technology Course,” AALL Annual Meeting, Boston, Massachusetts, July, 2004

David McGeehan, “Baseline Technology Competencies to Position Students, Faculty, and Staff for Success,” CALI Conference, Atlanta, Georgia, June, 2016

Sarah Mauldin and Maureen Cahill, “Law Firm Tech – What They Know, What They Want to Know, and What They Need to Know in Practice,” CALI Conference, Atlanta, Georgia, June, 2016

Nicole Iannarone, “Social Media: Ethical Considerations of Posting, Tweeting and Blogging in Law Practice,” CALI Conference, Atlanta, Georgia, June, 2016

Jane Winn, “Teaching Contract Drafting with Contracts Filed in the SEC Edgar Database,” CALI Conference, San Diego, California, June, 2012

Deborah Quentel, Joe Grohman, Marjorie McDiarmid, “Simulations in the Classroom & in Teaching: Using SIMPLE (SIMulated Professional Learning Environment), CALI Conference, Rutgers, New Jersey, June, 2010

Blog Posts

Mr. Ambrogi keeps an updated list of states that have adopted the ethical duty of technology competency, with the latest update on March 8, 2017.

Websites and Blogs

The center offers books, podcasts, and other resources, and publishes the blog Law Technology Today at http://www.lawtechnologytoday.org.

The division sponsors ABA Techshow, held in Chicago each March. It publishes Law Practice magazine, available to members online at http://www.americanbar.org/publications/law_practice_magazine/.

In advance of ABA Techshow it publishes an issue focused on technology in legal practice. The division also publishes several books discussing technology, including Sharon D. Nelson, John W. Simek, and Michael C. Maschke, The 2017 Solo and Small Firm Legal Technology Guide.

Ms. Black, an attorney who also does technology consulting and works for appfolio, maker of the MyCase case management system, also blogs about New York law at Sui Generis—A New York Law Blog, http://www.nylawblog.typepad.com/. She has authored several books, including Cloud Computing for Lawyers.

Another blog that often focuses on technology is Attorney at Work, http://attorneyatwork.com.

D. Casey Flaherty, former counsel for Kia Motors America, is perhaps best known for his writing about the service delivery review he developed for assessing outside counsel’s technology readiness. He is a cofounder of Procertas, which is now delivering an updated version of the review to firms and law schools, and he blogs at ACC Docket, http://www.accdocket.com and has written posts at several other blogs, including 3 Geeks and a Law Blog, http://www.geeklawblog.com.

Information About the Florida Bar’s Adoption of a Mandatory Technology CLE Requirement of Three Hours

The Vision 2016 Committee was created to perform an in-depth review of four general areas that will impact the future practice of law in Florida, including Technology. The committee’s recommendations led to the adoption of both the mandatory technology CLE requirement and the addition of the requirement of technology competence to the Florida Rule of Professional Conduct.