Accessing Library Databases

Databases are found on the library’s webpage.

You can find popular resources at the bottom of the page.
Off-Campus Access

Proxy Authentication

To access our databases off-campus, you will need to first log in on the Proxy page.

After clicking on the database link from the library page, you will be directed to a login page.

Enter your Web Access username and password.

Proxy Authentication may not appear if you enter the database link without first going through our webpage.
As Campbell Law students, you also have access to the databases available through the Norman A. Wiggins Library, Campbell’s main campus library. Many are listed on the law library’s Database page; you can find a complete list at http://www.lib.campbell.edu/databases

Law Review Articles

Law review articles are academic articles on discreet sub-points of law, usually either something that is new and/or controversial.

For academic papers, law review articles are probably the single best resource because:

- They usually go even more in-depth than other secondary sources (e.g. treatises) on their specific sub-topic.
- Cite to many, many other articles/resources on the same topic.
- Cover recent topics before treatises/looseleafs do.

Keep in mind... faculty almost always want PDF format!

Federal court dockets, including individual document filings, may be found on Bloomberg Law. Bloomberg Law has a contract with PACER, the federal filing system, so that most PACER filings can be searched and downloaded from Bloomberg’s site. Not all federal filings are available on Bloomberg (i.e. those designated sealed). Bloomberg has some access to state court dockets, but these documents may not be available within our subscription.
